

1st International Symposium on Human Mental Workload: Models and Applications

Dublin Institute of Technology, Dublin Ireland, 28-30 June 2017

<http://www.hworkload.org/2017/>

The 1st International Symposium on Human Mental Workload: Models and Applications (H-WORKLOAD 2017) will be held in Dublin (June 28-30, 2017) at Dublin Institute of Technology, Ireland, in association with the Irish Ergonomics Society Annual Conference 2017.

The scientific programme of WORKLOAD 2017 will consist of regular and technical contributions reviewed and selected by an international programme committee, as well as keynote talks and tutorials given by leading experts in their fields.

The symposium aims to become the premier event for discussion of emerging research on mental workload and its models and applications. It will bring together researchers and practitioners from different disciplines including human factors, computer science, psychology, education, and neuroscience and provide a mechanism for the exchange of ideas and technologies between a worldwide audience of academics and industrial scientists.

We solicit submissions on previously unpublished research work on human mental workload covering all disciplines and domains. Example areas include but are not limited to:

- Mental workload theory and frameworks
- Measurement of mental workload
- Mental workload in context
- Applications of mental workload in practice
- Mental workload in safety critical domains

All accepted papers will be published in the digital conference proceedings and a selection of papers will be chosen for a planned special volume published by Springer. Please see guidelines on paper preparation and submission on the conference website.
